(3 films)

Torn Paper • Crayon Resist • Monotype Prints

Produced by Frank Bach and Reino Randall

Central Washington College of Education • Ellensburg, Washington

Designed For:

Elementary and secondary students, teachers, art supervisors, amateur and professional artists.

Purposes:

1. To show new ways in which these techniques can be used effectively.
2. To encourage student participation in creative activities.
3. To provide ideas for experimentation by advanced students.
4. To show the application of design principles and their contribution to the quality of the finished product.

Film Facts:

Each film approximately 5 minutes, 16mm sound and color. The films may be used separately or as a series.

Synopsis:

Children and adults demonstrate clever and unusual ways of:

- Forming pictures with shapes and figures torn from colored paper, then adhered to a paper background.
- Creating designs with wax crayon and rubber cement, which acts as a resist to watercolor and tempera washes.
- Making prints by drawing on glass with household cement, spreading paint over the glass, then transferring the design to paper.
